

What is an Omnibus Survey?

An Omnibus survey is a method of quantitative market research where multiple companies in the same industry provide proprietary questions on a wide variety of topics in one questionnaire. It is one of the best ways to obtain valuable strategic market research in a cost effective manner because the participating companies, who only receive responses to the questions they submitted, share the cost of the survey.

Quarterly Omnibus Market Research Survey (Clubs, Shoes, Balls & Apparel)

Overview:

The structure of this Omnibus survey is very flexible allowing companies to ask golfers any number of questions using a wide variety of question types. In addition, images or audio/video can be embedded into the survey and there is no minimum or limit to the number of questions. The omnibus survey is a proven tool that provides golf manufacturers, distributors and other golf industry professionals with timely customer insights and perceptions on topics, products and trends.

How it Works:

The data is collected through an online survey of 500 golfers randomly selected across the United States who play four or more rounds per year.

1. Your marketing team submits market research questions for the survey
2. The Key Group optimizes your question designs
3. The questions are programmed into the survey
4. 500 responses are collected over a 2 week period
5. Your response data is converted into a graphical output (PowerPoint)
6. The final report is delivered within 30 days of question submission

Note: All data remains confidential to the company that submitted the questions
